

Disclosure Consulting

With the Korea Exchange's recent tightening of its screening requirements for delisting for disclosure violations, the importance of disclosure risk management is now greater than ever. Disclosure violations may not only subject the breaching entity to penalty points or fines, but also cause significant management risks that directly affect listing status, including trading suspensions and substantive reviews of listing eligibility. Therefore, listed companies need to ensure the accuracy and timeliness of their disclosures and systematically manage the entire disclosure process, from the initial discovery of the information through the determination of whether it requires disclosure and the submission of the disclosure documents.

The Listing and Disclosure Regulation Team of Shin & Kim LLC examines the listing systems and work processes of listed companies to identify the causes of disclosure omissions or delays, and, based on its findings, supports the establishment and improvement of an internal disclosure management system that is efficient and tailored to the organization and work of each company. Our team also provides comprehensive legal advice on disclosure, including determining whether material corporate matters trigger disclosure obligations, reviewing draft disclosures, preventing non-compliant disclosures, responding to regulatory sanctions, and training directors, officers and employees.
