Mr. Tak-Kyun Hong is currently a partner at Shin & Kim, where he specializes in advising companies on government investigations, criminal trials, and regulatory matters. Mr. Hong also advises clients on anti-corruption or anti-money laundering compliance, along with corporate internal investigations.

Mr. Hong has extensive experience handling a variety of government investigation cases, addressing issues such as bribery of public officials; fraud, embezzlement, or breach of trust by executives of large corporations; financial market crimes including accounting fraud, stock market manipulation, or fraudulent financial transactions; theft of trade secrets involving the semiconductor, automotive, or battery industries; criminal competition law violations such as collusion or unfair practices; and violations of trade or foreign exchange transactions regulations. Additionally, Mr. Hong has advised Korean companies in the World Bank's investigation and sanctions proceedings, as well as in the US Department of Justice (DOJ) or Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) investigations involving the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA). He has also been involved in matters related to mutual legal assistance treaties and extradition between Korea and other countries.

Mr. Hong earned a bachelor's degree in politics from Seoul National University, an LL.M in corporate law from New York University, and a Ph.D. in competition law from Sungkyunkwan University. He has also contributed as a visiting researcher at UC Irvine School of Law. Prior to joining Shin & Kim, Mr. Hong handled civil and criminal court cases as a public-service advocate and served as a public prosecutor at district offices of the Prosecutors' Office, including the Cheongju District Prosecutors' Office. Currently, he holds a position as a board member of the International Association of Korean Lawyers (IAKL).
